

1850

Founded at the corner of Third and Bauer Street downtown, The Jewish Hospital becomes the first Jewish hospital in the U.S.

1890

A new hospital building is dedicated on Burnet Avenue in Avondale.

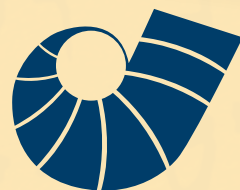

1892

The Jewish Hospital School of Nursing is established.

1895 The Jewish Hospital accepts its first medical intern, making it the first Jewish teaching hospital in the U.S.

1946

The Jewish Hospital's Women's Auxiliary is established to support the hospital with fundraising and volunteers.

1975

The shofar is introduced as the hospital's logo.

1979

The first Seder service is offered for patients.

1988

The Jewish Hospital acquires Otto C. Epp Memorial Hospital and converts it to The Jewish Hospital in Kenwood. Until 1997, there are two Jewish Hospitals in Cincinnati.

1994

The Jewish Hospital joins the Health Alliance, a consortium of Greater Cincinnati hospitals.

1997

The Health Alliance closes The Jewish Hospital in Avondale, with most services transferred to The Jewish Hospital in Kenwood.

2010

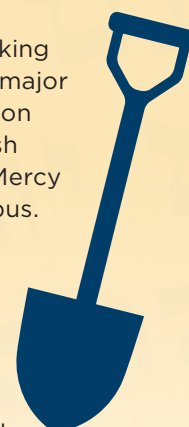

The Jewish Foundation of Cincinnati transfers ownership of The Jewish Hospital to Mercy Health Partners. From 2010 to 2015, Mercy Health invests more than $130 million in The Jewish Hospital in capital and technology infrastructure and campus renovations.

2014

Groundbreaking begins on a major transformation of The Jewish Hospital — Mercy Health campus.

2014

The Jewish Foundation invests $16 million in The Jewish Hospital to support expanded graduate medical education and a renovated emergency department.

Help us honor our calling to exceed the highest standards of care

The Jewish Hospital
 MERCYHEALTH

As the symbol of the Jewish faith, the shofar represents the call to unite.
To act. And to serve.

Answering this call is in the DNA of The Jewish Hospital-Mercy Health in Cincinnati; it's the very reason we exist. And now, just like it did on cloud-covered Mt. Sinai, the great sound of the shofar will resonate to inspire a new generation to hear and heed its summons.

The sound and our mission are crystal clear.

Tikkun olam—heal the world.

The Jewish Hospital
 MERCYHEALTH

The Jewish Hospital
 MERCYHEALTH